TEACHING

COURSES TAUGHT

University of Georgia, Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resources

PRTM 1100e: Introduction to Travel and Tourism (14 sections; 87-200 students).

This course is a survey of travel and tourism in a global context. Students become acquainted with the economic, socio-cultural, demographic, and environmental impacts that tourism has on the world community. Special emphasis is placed on issues faced by tourism developers in businesses and governments of all sizes.

PRTM 5900/7900: Ecotourism and Sustainable Development (9 sections; 10-25 students)

This course is designed to provide students with an introduction to the topic of tourism and to provide a broad discussion of what constitutes sustainable tourism from non-sustainable tourism. The discussion of sustainable tourism is centered on tourism's positive and negative impacts across the triple bottom line (environmental, socio-cultural, and economic sustainability). Specific strategies to minimize these negative impacts and to facilitate their positive impact is the primary objective of the class.

PRTM 5010: Entrepreneurship in Commercial Recreation and Tourism (9 sections; 10-20 students)

This course is designed to introduce students to the fundamental concepts, principles and approaches to operating commercial recreation and tourism business in both public and private natural resource settings. After completion of this course, students will have gained the knowledge and entrepreneurial skills needed to analyze market conditions, find gaps in recreation and tourism offerings, and capitalize on these gaps by creating business plans aimed towards attracting investors

FANR 4500: Senior Project (1 section; 6 students)

Senior project is the Warnell School of Forestry and Natural Resource's capstone class. It involves students identifying natural resource management problems and working with clients to development objective and management alternatives to solve the problem.

FANR/MARS 1100: Natural Resource Conservation (1 section; 60 students)

This course introduces students to general principles and contemporary issues related to how we use and protect a variety of natural resources on the planet. Topics include ecology and management of wildlife, fish, forests, and rangelands; natural resources recreation and tourism; conservation of water, wetlands, and soil resources; and renewable and non-renewable energy (Co-instructed with Dr. Susan Wilde).

NRRT 8980: Research/Theories of Human Dimensions, Recreation & Tourism (2 sections; ~10 students)

This seminar-style course is designed to provide graduate students with an opportunity to learn about specific research and theories related to the human dimensions of natural resources, outdoor recreation participation and trends, and sustainable tourism. This course also reviews and critiques the various research approaches and designs used within these fields of study.

FYOS 1001: Travel and Tourism around the World (11 sections; ~15 students)

This First Year Odyssey will provide students with an introduction to travel and tourism and the many complexities of managing such a global industry. Specific attention will be given to tourism's potential to bring large-scale positive and negative economic, environmental, and socio-cultural impacts to communities where it takes place. After introducing some introductory material, the class's focus will switch to covering travel issues across each of the 7 continents and here at home in Athens, GA.
