1. ACADEMIC EMPLOYMENT

Assistant Professor, Human Dimensions of Urban & Community Forestry, University of Georgia. June 1, 2019-present

Associate Extension Professor of Urban and Community Forestry, Mississippi State University. 2016-May 31, 2019

Assistant Extension Professor of Urban and Community Forestry, Mississippi State University, 2010-2016

Other academic experience:

Forestry Extension Program Coordinator, Department of Forestry, Mississippi State University, July 1, 2017 to May 31, 2019. Responsibility for seeking extramural funding to support programming, producing the program's annual report and plan of work, coordinating programming efforts of Forestry Extension staff across the state, and integrating extension faculty and staff with the teaching/research faculty and staff.

Graduate Research Assistant, Department of Rural Sociology, The Pennsylvania State University, September 1, 2005 to December 31, 2009

COFA 5500/7500, Community Forest Management

This is a split-level, three-credit course taught every spring semester. It is required of all Community Forestry and Arboriculture (COFA) Area of Emphasis (AOE) students. The purpose of this course is to provide students with an understanding of sustainability, governance, planning, and assessment that must be considered in urban tree management, and how these elements must be considered within the community's social and ecological contexts. Content and format were newly created for COFA students. Topics covered include: community development and planning, tree canopy and vegetation management, ordinances, tree inventories, tree appraisal and associated values, risk assessment and liability, maintenance cycles, disaster response, right of way management, recreational values, budgets and staffing, tree boards and volunteers, professional development, and sustainability goals. Therefore, this course helps future urban resource managers to understand, appreciate, and incorporate different aspects of ecological and human dimensions in their canopy-management decisions. Evaluation consists of quizzes and assignment, two exams, and a forest management plan that includes a limited tree inventory.

COFA 5001/7001, Urban Tree Management I

This split-level, three-hour course is co-taught with Dr. Kim Coder every fall semester. It is required of all COFA students. This course covers anatomy and physiology of urban trees, including tree growth and development, functions, morphology, ecological responses to external/internal changes. It also provides an overview of treatment prescriptions and applications in the landscape. Evaluation consists of two exams, a comprehensive final exam, and a final paper. Graduate students have more in-depth exams than undergraduates and must make a presentation.

COFA 5010/7010, Urban Tree Management II

This split-level, four-credit course is co-taught with Dr. Kim Coder every fall semester. It includes a weekly three-hour lab and is required of all COFA students. The class reviews tree planting, training, pruning, lightning protection, cabling & bracing, fertilization, survey of basic climbing, general tree problems, and construction damage as they apply to shade, street, park and right-of-way trees in community and urban forest sites. This course covers the national tree care standards of the United States and the International Society of Arboriculture best management practices for tree health care. It prepares students for international credentials as professional arborists and tree health care providers. Evaluation consists of two exams, a comprehensive final exam, and lab flow charts. Graduate students have more in-depth exams than undergraduates and must make a presentation.

FANR 4500S, Senior Project in Forestry and Natural Resources Management

This is a team-taught four-credit capstone service-learning course. In addition to advising student project teams, I started coordinating the course in fall semester 2020. Students demonstrate their knowledge and skills, including problem-solving, decision-making, and communication capabilities learned during their tenure at Warnell. Students work with actual stakeholders to solve a relevant natural resource problem such as a forest management plan. Students must collect and analyze data, and summarize results to make recommendations based on the best combination of biological, financial, legal, social, and ethical considerations. Students are evaluated on how effectively they work in a professional setting, including group work, analyses, ability to keep records, meet deadlines, and communication of ideas. In addition, students are graded on a final report submitted to their "client" and a final report presentation. The course format consists of weekly lectures and weekly meetings with two group advisors.

FANR 3400/3400D, Society and Natural Resources

This is a two-credit course taught every fall semester. It contains a discussion portion (i.e., "lab") in addition to lecture. The purpose of this course is to provide students with an introductory understanding of the social, political, and ethical aspects of making natural resource management decisions and the related consequences of those decisions for our natural resources. It examines how human values, sociocultural, and social structural contexts (e.g., gender, race, wealth, power) impact natural resource management. Learning objectives are designed around values, stakeholder participation, ethics, and equity in natural resource management. Therefore, this course helps future resource managers to critically understand, appreciate, and incorporate different aspects of human dimensions in their land-management decisions. Students are evaluated using quizzes and assignments, one exam, discussion, and a final paper.

COFA 3900, Community Forestry and Arboriculture Internship

This is a team-taught three-credit course with instructors representing the various components of Warnell’s majors. Students wishing to complete an internship for course credit are required to work for a sponsoring organization for 100 to 300 hours. Students must submit a written assignment and make an oral presentation. Employers complete an evaluation. Besides advising and evaluating students, instructors initiate internship paperwork with employers.

FYOS 1001, First-Year Odyssey Seminar

Taught twice to date at UGA. Entitled “Keeping it Green: Natural Resource Management for Cities and Towns,” this one-credit seminar takes a multidisciplinary approach to introducing students to the world of community forestry – the management of single trees and groups of trees as well as associated water and soil resources in urban, suburban, neighborhoods, and small-town landscapes. Course topics address urban ecology, arboriculture, community development, recreation, urban wildlife conflict, governance, and community planning among others. Because UGA is a designated Tree Campus USA, students learn about many of these topics using campus as a living laboratory. In addition, students learn about the tripartite mission of the Land Grant University as well as the breadth of career opportunities in community forestry and arboriculture, including those that advance technology in computational, microbiological, and spatial sciences. Evaluation consists of quizzes and a final report with presentation.

3. Recognitions and outstanding achievements

a. Certifications and credentials

1. Certified Arborist (SO-6848A), International Society of Arboriculture, 2012-present
2. Tree Risk Assessment Qualification, International Society of Arboriculture, 2015-present

b. Awards

1. Warnell Alumni Award for Outreach, 2021, University
2. President’s Award of Merit, 2019, International Society of Arboriculture Southern Chapter, Regional
3. Second place poster award, Co-author with A. Shrestha, Ph.D. Graduate Student, Impact of Geospatial Factors on Fuel Reduction Treatment Implementation by Nonindustrial Private Forest Landowners. In the annual meeting of the International Society of Forest Resource Economics, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, 2019, International

4. Comprehensive Family Forest Education Program (Team Award – University of Georgia), National Woodland Owners Association and the National Association of University Forest Resources Programs, 2019, National
5. Third place poster award, Co-author with A. Shrestha, Ph.D. Graduate Student, Implementation of fuel reduction treatments on non-industrial private forest lands in Mississippi. In the annual meeting of the International Society of Forest Resource Economics, New Orleans, LA, 2017, International
6. Communications award: Newsletters by a team (Mississippi State University Forestry Extension), The Overstory, The National Association of County Agriculture Agents, 2018, National
7. Award for Excellence in Arboriculture Education, International Society of Arboriculture Southern Chapter, 2017, Regional
8. Xi Sigma Pi Honor Society for Forestry, 2018
9. Selected to Grant Proposal Writers Grant Writers Workshop, 2018
10. Second place video presentation Communications Award, Introduction to Arboriculture Webinar Short Course, Mississippi Association of County Agriculture Agents, 2016
11. Third place Computer Generated Graphics Presentation Communications Award, The Importance of Replacing an Urban Tree Canopy, Mississippi Association of County Agriculture Agents, 2016
12. First place Workbook Extreme Weather Short Course, National Association of County Agriculture Agents, 2016
13. Award for Excellence: Program Organization: Comprehensive Forestry Education to Prisoners (John Auel, Jason Gordon, James Henderson, John Kushla, Randy Rousseau, John Willis), Southern Regional Extension Forestry, 2015
14. Early Career Award, MSU College of Forest Resources, 2014
15. Extension/Outreach Award, MSU College of Forest Resources, 2014
16. Comprehensive Family Forest Education Program (Team Award), National Woodland Owners Association and the National Association of University Forest Resources Programs (NAUFRP), 2014
17. Customer Outreach Award, MSU Extension Service, 2014
18. Bronze Award for Radio, Southern Regional Extension Forestry, 2013
19. Newsletter Award: The Overstory, Mississippi Association of County Agriculture Agents, 2013
20. Newsletter Award: The Overstory, Southern Regional Extension Forestry, 2013
21. Video Award: Managing the Family Forest in Mississippi, Southern Regional Extension Forestry, 2013
22. Silver Award for Long Publication: Conozca Sus Arboles, Association of Natural Resource Extension Professionals, 2012
23. Bronze Award for Innovative Program: Conozca sus Arboles, Association of Natural Resource Extension Professionals, 2012
24. Family Forests in Education Award, National Association of University Forest Resource Programs, 2012
25. Silver Award for Publication: Conozca sus Arboles, Southern Regional Extension Forestry, 2012
26. Mississippi State Pride Award, Mississippi State University, 2011
27. Gold Award for Excellence, Forestry Friday on Farm and Family Radio Southern Regional Extension Forestry, 2011
28. Certified Tree Farm Inspector, Mississippi Forestry Association, 2010
29. Rural Sociological Society Dissertation Award, Rural Sociological Society, 2008
30. College of Agricultural Sciences Dissertation Award, The Pennsylvania State University, 2008
31. College of Agriculture Travel Award, The Pennsylvania State University, 2006 & 2009
32. Outstanding Paper Award, Community Response to Forest Fire Risk, Natural Resources Research Group, Rural Sociological Society, 2006
33. Gamma Sigma Delta Honor Society for Agriculture, 2007

4. PUBLIC SERVICE

1. Outreach (Extension)

Dr. Gordon’s outreach appointment combines his disciplinary foundations in forestry and rural sociology to address the needs of stakeholders in natural resource management. His educational program has focused on community forestry and arboriculture. Example program topics include: urban forestry inventory, urban tree measurements, tree risk assessment, tree identification and selection, landscape ordinances, urban forest planning, canopy benefits and management, GPS/GIS/UAV, climate variability, selection and establishment of trees, tree pruning, planting and establishment, soil management, tree biology, irrigation systems for trees, controlling invasive species, urban ecology, tree pest and disease diagnosis. Program formats consist of short courses, workshops, field days, seminars, and webinars. As well, he advises clients using office calls, site visits, email, and the Georgia Distance Diagnostic Service. Tables 1 and 2 provide an outreach instruction summary of facts.
